This will take place next Friday and the PTA have organised a lovely afternoon for the children, with exhibits created by parents to show some of their favourite things about their families, heritage and culture. Thanks to everyone who volunteered to help with this. If anyone still wants to get involved please let us know, the more the merrier, for this, the first event of its type at Carnarvon.

The event is then open to all from 3.20pm till 4.00pm in the school hall. We really hope you can pop along and take a look. You can see our map of the world, taste some food/drinks and view the different exhibits.

Children are welcome to dress in clothes that reflect their heritage on the day.

In addition, the children will get a chance to look at the plethora of interactive science-related exhibits in the different themed areas of the museum. There's also the super Sci-Tek playground outside to explore and enjoy. It promises to be a fun-packed and exciting learning experience for us all.

The cost for the science park, workshops and transport is £28.00 per child, please pay via ParentPay.

Consent forms will be sent home nearer the time.

Thank you.
